Class 9 :
Prepositions of Possession

Prepositions of Possession

The Possessive form is used in a sentence in context of things that belong to a person or animal. We can also use it to show a connection between things. Some of the most commonly used prepositions of possession are of, with and to.

examples:

- This is the house of Mormons.
- He's the boy with the olive sunglasses.
- This book is a property of the Half Blood Prince.
- The house on the mountain belongs to my grandmother.
- She's the one with the ponytail.

The preposition form words and their usage:

Of: This preposition of possession is usually used for cities, countries, people, and possessive pronouns. Of is placed in a sentence to show possession of a place like a city, country or people or possessive pronouns like mine, yours, etc.

With: With is used with objects/materials/animals, accents, and physical characteristics. To fully understand this definition, read the examples below and come back again to this definition to see what we mean:

Usual form: With + adjective/noun

Let's see a few examples:

- I saw a girl with a pink purse.
- The boy with the dragon tattoo is sitting by the corner.
- The cat with black spots on her tail is my pet.

To: A preposition that shows possession, this is usually used in the expression "belong to".

Usual form: To + object pronouns(it, him, he r)

Let's see a few examples:

- This race course belongs to the Government.
- This garden belongs to my old aunt Mercy.
